Summary: How far had he fallen, he didn't know, but as long as she went down that road with him he didn't care.

Sinful, Delicious Love

She moved her body so sinfully to the music, the taunt muscles on her stomach tightened as she danced in a rhythmical rhythm. Sheen sweat shown on her body, a particular one deviously trailed down her neck to the swell of her breast and disappeared into her kimono, making her skin glisten like thousands of diamonds. Though he would prefer her over diamonds any day, she was much more satisfying and better looking in his opinion.

He knew she thought that only few could match her wit and humor, he was one of those fortunate ones and if he said so himself he was the best at it. He was her equal, he gave her what only few could offer, he was her perfect match and no one could deny it.

She often challenged him, made him think to do things he normally wouldn't do, all for her. He once thought Kondou-San was the only person he could look up to, only person he needed. But he was wrong; she made him need her, made him want her so badly it hurt worse than being shot. She would persuade him with little effort on her part to join her in anything she was thinking of doing and this time was no different. Her little finger drew him towards her, but it was ultimately the way she dipped her body to stretch those muscles that only he knew were there made him give in and submit.

He would never live it down, the guys made sure of that with bouts of playful teasing, in all honestly those sinfully delicious lips, the way she twisted herself to show off every curve and especially the sexy, naughty twinkle that shone in her eyes done him in.

He couldn't stop and he knew she couldn't either both tried to stay away, tried to forget and move on from there attraction for each other. When he pushed her away all those times, when he tried to love Chizuru over her. At first it was nearly primal, only the touch and feel of her body made his heart race but soon it turned into more, the way she dealt with enemies, the way her eyes would light up at the sight of her favorite food or whenever she saw him.

How far had he fallen, he didn't know, but as long as she went down that road with him he didn't care.
